

MEXICAN MATRON GETS HER CHILDREN BACK

Court Orders That the Three Little Ones Be Returned to Their Home.

ENDS FLIGHT AND FIGHT

Senora Beatriz Hija de Chavero
Followed Husband and Rival
Here and Got Habeas Corpus Writ.

Senora Beatriz Hija de Chavero, prominent in social circles in the Mexican capital, obtained yesterday from Justice Delany an order under which she regained custody of her three children, for whom she has been fighting ever since she found them here with her husband two weeks ago.

The Chaveros were married in the City of Mexico in 1888 and lived together until September 7 last, when the father disappeared with their children. His wife discovered that he had brought them to this city, accompanied by Maria Teresa Gamboa, who, his wife states, is known as "the widow Vega."

The children, Alfredo, twelve years old; Maria Louise, seven, and Carmen, six, arrived here with their father and his companion early in October and registered, according to Senora Chavero, at the Hotel Chelsea, as Emilio Chavez Martin and as Maria Quintana de Chavez. Later they moved to an apartment at No. 6 West 101st street, where she found them.

After she began habeas corpus proceedings she learned, according to her affidavit, that her husband had engaged passage for Argentina on a steamer to sail November 1. Thereupon a warrant was issued for the children and they were turned over to the Children's Society, in whose care they have since remained. Neither Chavero nor the "Widow Vega" sailed for Argentina.

Following a hearing before Justice Delany, an agreement was entered into between the mother and father by which the children were to be taken back to Mexico at their joint expense. Robert M. Cosgrove, an officer of the Children's Society, is to be guardian and custodian of the children on the trip, his expenses being paid by the mother.

The father may sail on the same steamer, which will leave New York on Thursday, and it is stipulated that he is to have no control over the children nor interfere with their guardianship until they are turned over to the courts of Mexico City.

SURGERY A CURE FOR INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Deformities Due to Dreaded
Disease Yield to Tendon
Transplantation.

Possibilities of the cure of infantile paralysis, next to rickets, the most prolific source of deformities are set forth in "The Medical Journal" by Dr. E. P. Magruder, of Washington, who gives the results of his work in treating the malady. Drs. Flexner and Noguchi, of the Rockefeller Institute, have only recently succeeded in isolating the organism producing the disease.

Dr. Magruder tells of transplanting tendons to cure the paralysis in the lower limbs, screws being used to hold the tendons in place, and adds as his conclusions:

"The writer is of the opinion that many cases of infantile paralysis, regarded as hopeless, are amenable to the treatment herewith suggested. The double fixation method with tendon transplantation in paralysis of the lower extremity is, he believes, a valuable surgical asset. It is an effective substitute for arthrodesis, much less destructive of tissue, quicker in result, much surer and much simpler. Further, it does not permanently destroy the integrity of the joint or entail the extensive destruction of bone, or cartilage, or both, and does not have to wait for the dictum of the 'tenth year' in order to be effective. Again, the screws can be removed when strength to stand and muscular function are firmly established, thus restoring at least in part the integrity of the ankle joint. At this late date of removal recurrence is quite improbable. We may style the scaphoid and cuboid bones the key to the arch of the foot, and their fixation at this critical period with that of the ankle joint itself adds material strength to both. It is very effective in the prevention of toe drop. That the screws may act as foreign bodies is an exaggerated fear. Foreign bodies become active only in the presence of infection. Lexer and Lane have shown this conclusively.

A double fixation is a double strengthening. It makes assurance doubly sure. The footbridge with handle bars and strings upon the ground running parallel is, I am persuaded, an effective device, the simplicity of which is its recommendation. The value of the open air and sunshine, in connection with the exercises as carried out with this device, is patent. The little patient early learns to become independent of another's assistance, which stimulates and encourages self-confidence.
